

Living that Youthpass life

The Youthpass adventure started for me with luck. A friend of mine, who already participated in training courses before, talked to me about organized near my city. I didn't have anything to do (I finished my previous job earlier that week), so she explained me how the training course was functioning several European youngsters gather to get a course on a subject) and I immediately decided to go. At this point my luck still go strong as the training course is about Social Entrepreneurship, a subject that interests me a lot.

And then I met the people at the training course.

I met a lot of people in one week and what I got from this is the incredible variety of personalities, of opinions, of creativity we all had, and we all shared.

The trainees were also great as they knew how to transmit their knowledge and experience in Social Entrepreneurship, but what was most important was how they foster creativity and bonding within our group.

We had a lot of ideas at the end of the training course and some of us already implemented these ideas.

For me it changed my future's perspective, I decided to prolong my European dream through another training course and more importantly through an EVS in Croatia from which I'm writing right now.

And the circle continues as I'm trying to create a Youth Exchange with the help of my organization, hoping that it will change someone else's perspective just as it changed mine.

Discovering the city through a quick city tour on a sunny day.

Chabane Yannis Bachouchi

Yannis.bachouchi@hotmail.fr

Point of view of participant

Last gathering time with reception of our Youthpasses.